

Why should I register in WV REDI now?

Previous emergencies have demonstrated that many people have a strong desire to provide assistance during disasters. Limited or delayed access to credentialing information can prevent volunteers from being able to do so. Whether you are a licensed health care provider or a person otherwise willing to volunteer your time and service to assist in health and medical response, advanced registration in WV REDI can help ensure that you will be identified, cleared and able to assist quickly.

What is WV REDI?

The Responder Emergency Deployment Information (REDI) System is a web-based registration and credentialing system for West Virginia health care professionals and others who are willing to assist during a health emergency that exceeds routine response capacity.

As a WV REDI participant, what kind of activities might I be participating in during a response?

Volunteers might be called upon to assist with direct health care services or public health response activities such as disease investigation, community vaccination or distribution of medication.

What information will I need to provide during registration?

You will be asked to complete several fields of personal and professional information, which include previous education, training, licenses, vaccinations and employment status. Not all information is required for registration; however accurate completion of all fields helps system administrators determine how best to utilize your skills during a response.

Will my personal information be secure within the WV REDI system?

WV REDI meets federal Emergency Systems for Advance Registration of Volunteer Health Professionals (ESAR-VHP) program requirements. Examples of protective measures to ensure privacy include:

- encrypted transfer and storage of data
- firewall protection
- permission-based administrator accounts

What will be expected of me after I register in WV REDI?

After registration, individuals are linked to a local health and medical volunteer group within their area. Groups may provide training opportunities and information or other tools needed for response. While recommended, registration does not require that you attend group meetings or trainings.

Registration does not obligate you to volunteer during an emergency. If selected to assist during a response, you will be contacted using the information submitted during the registration process. At that time, you will have the opportunity to indicate whether or not you are willing and able to respond.

What if my information changes after I register?

Information changes and updates may be completed as often as necessary by logging on to www.wvredi.org. After providing your username and password, you will be able to edit your information.
